

DO YOU KNOW SOMEONE COMMITTED TO SOCIAL JUSTICE? NOMINATE THEM FOR THE IRIS MARION YOUNG AWARD FOR POLITICAL ENGAGEMENT

Like the philosopher, social theorist and former Pitt faculty member Iris Marion Young, this award recognizes that social activism takes many forms. Justice can be pursued in a variety of ways and places—in the classroom and workplace, in organizations, through specific projects, in academic scholarship, in politics and volunteer work. The venue doesn't matter – the effort and quality of contribution does.

We invite nominations of any member of the University of Pittsburgh staff, faculty, graduate or undergraduate community who work to promote social justice and democracy. We especially welcome nominations of individuals whose work explicitly engages issues of gender and sexuality. Nominate someone using this form or by emailing ant53@pitt.edu.
